HONGKONG, OCTOBER 30TH, 1878.

The cowardica so frequently displayed by Chinese lukongs found a good illustration in There was a fight with bamboos in High Street in which one poor old man received at fatal blow. Constable Kay had grappled three of the rioters, and was surrounded by a crowd of excited people. He called to the lukong, who was standing about nine, yards as his advisor. distant, to render assistance in securing the prisoners. . Instead of doing so, however, the "lukong stood calmily blowing his whistle to summon assistance, doubtless deeming discretion the better part of valour. The consequence was that two of the prisoners got. clear away. This was bad enough, but it might have been much worse. P.C. KAY might have shared the fate of the man who died the next day from his injuries. The bamboo is a dangerous weapon, and a blow on the head from it is very likely to cause fracture of the skull. The lukong was charged with misconduct, and the case clearly proved against him, when the Magistrate very properly inflicted a heavy fine with the alternative is six weeks imprisonment. Considering the serious consequences that might that did ensue, from such a gross evasion of duty by a policeman, the sentence was not a whit too severe, and we think that the dismissal of Mr. Ho Akwsono from the Force should follow his conviction at the Police Court.

. It is to be hoped that this instance of cowardice following upon that notable display of the same quality by the lukougs in the Police boat when ordered to pursue the steam launch Kats on the night of the Wing Lok-street raid, will be duly noted by the Authorities. The utter worthlessness of the purposes has been again and again demonstrated. They can never be depended upon in any emergency, and it was a huge mismake the Chinese contingent This was done against the advice and opinion of the most competent judges of Chinese character, and the result. cannot be regarded as satisfications 'W' re produce one or two opinions on the Chinese as police constables from the Raport of the Police Commission which sat in 1872.

At the Police Court yesterday, a woman charged a min with attempting to steal a brass smoking pipe from her hand, in Po Yan-street. night. The Magistrate asked her if she had pass with her and she replied " No, a pass is not necessary for a woman." When the subject of lights and passes was before the Legislative. Conneil there was some discussion as to whether the provision should be made to apply to women. The Conneil decided that women should be required to carry passes on the ground that if they were exempt there would be a danger of thieves moving about at night disguised as women.

No also whatever had been obtained of the murderers up till the other day, so the information runs, when the little girl, who was being carried down the street on the back of a man who had been taking care of her, suddenly remarked that a certain man she pointed to had hurt her father. The man was immediately given in charge, and than confessed the whole story, which in most of its features was commonplace enough. The only really carious thing is that the three men who were accomplices in the act were a sake merchant, an oil worthant, and a pawnbroker, all well-known men who had been reputed honest tradesmen. It is not alloged that either had been under any suspicion of using his ostensible business as a cover for any other. Hiogo News.

MAHOMEDANISM IN CHINA AND EASTERN TURKESTAN.

At a time like this, when the principal Maho nedan Power in the world, and the only one is Europe, is showing so many signs of decrepitude and decay, it is interesting to knew, that there are some twenty millions of Muslims away in Eastern Asia, who are displaying a vitality which causes uneasiness to the reigning Chinese dynasty, and are likely, according to some writers, to bring about the conversion of the inhabitants of that vast empire to the faith of the Arabian Prophet. It is from an able remanifol a work by M. Dabry, recently read before the French codemy by M. Dronyn do Lhuys, an eminent Statesman of the Second Empire, that we stretch out bland in a far more easterly direction gather the following facts: It appears that than this river, and it not only drains the central the Mahomedans of China trace their origin province of Siberia and Mongolia, but pierces to a settlement made in the Far East as early as also the watershed of the streams that flow down uncle of Mahomed, who was sent with presents those to Persia and to Horaclius, together with that already mentioned, Wahb-Abi-Kaboha orformed his long journey by sou, and handed at Canton, whence he betook himself to Singan build a mosque and onjoy the free exercise of his religion in a manner somewhat analogous to that necorded to St. Augustine in this island a century earlier. The first mosque was erected at Canton, and still exists, though, like some of our most anciont churches, it has had to be more than once rebuilt It is vanarated to day as the "Temple of Holy Memory," and in its neighbourbood is situate a tomb: said to be that of the " Aucient Sage who brought to the shores of China the light of the true laith." The second mosque was erected in the north-east of the Empire in the year 742 where the Mussulman colony was not less numerous than in the south. This colony consisted chiefly of traders who, after a more or less prolonged sojourn, returned for the most part into their own country. The true stock of the present Chinese Mahomedans was a small army of 1,000 Arabian soldiers sout by the Khaliff Abou Giafer in the year 755 to aid the Emperor in puting down a dangerous robellion. These soldiers had permission to settle in China as a reward for their services, where they married native wives. Three centuries later, whon the conquests of Gengis Khan opened up a channel of communication between Eastern and Western Asia, large numbers of Syrians, Persians, and Arabs penet rated into the Empire, and thus increased the Mussulman community. The new comers appear to have been well received by the heads of the Mobetter than it was imderstood in Christian Europe at the same perfed. Still. wherever this was practicable, that made but fews have remained in the West. It was chiefly by the purchase of children from the surround. copulations during successive famines that they swelled their numbers, and grew into the formidable power they have long been in the very heart of the Empire.

The intelligence that has come from time to time from Russia of expeditions being fitted out the speculators will be able to reach the richest and trading corporations formed to develop the mining districts of Russia, to touch the caravan sea trade of Northern Asia shows that at length, trade of Central Asia, and at the same time to after centuries of inactivity, the Russians are be within easy reach of the locomotive. Towards the sea the Obi, after receiving the last of its tributaries, broadens ont into a huge estuary, which for nearly 1,000 miles is known as the Gulf of Obi. In this inhespitable region there is little to promoto a profitable trade, and for seven months out of the twelve the shores are ribbed with cliffs of ice. Projects are on foot for oreating a port at the mouth of the Obl, or somewhere along the gulf, but it is bardly possible these schemes will be realised for many years to come. For the present Europe must be content with the small moreles accorded her by Russia in the shape of navel commissions to map the stream; and useful endeavours to ease the navigation by means of buoys, channel marks and lighthouses: The second river system in the series issues

Whatever notoriety the monarch, he was well received; and allowed to Yenesei possesses arises from the reflected glory of its tributary, the Angam. This river taker its rise in the Baikal, a lake as large as England and reputed to be the despest in the world. It is frozen over from November to April, in common with the rest of the Russian lakes, and during the remaining five months affords employ ment to thousands of men in councetion with its seal and salmon fisheries. A small stream connects the Baikal with Kiachta, the great amporium for trade between Bussia and China, and through which passes nearly the whole of the overland commerce between the two Empires. At the point where the lake issues into the Angara is situated Irkutsk, a busy manufacturing town of 28,000 inhabitants, and having a dockyard for the erection and repair of vessels belongto the Siberian flotilla. The trade there during the summer annually exceeds 4.000,000 roubles. The remaining river, the Leva, which this year is to be the scene of Professor Nordenskuld's explorations, offers very few inducements for a profitable sea trade. It is easily navigable for vessels of large draught, and in its upper course it passes through extensive coal-fields; but the country it drains is a dreary expanse of forest and bog, peopled only by ton or twelve thousand nomads and emiles. Its products are few in num ber, and except in the shape of fur and fossil ivory presents no inducement to the establishmout massive cliffs of ice, in which the remains of mammoths and other antedituvian animals lie outbedded like plums in a pudding or flints in their religious laws to marry among themselves whalk. These the natives dig out-often with flesh on the bones of the mammoth as fresh as it was when originally iced up ages ago-and send the ivory in sledges to the fair at Yakutsk. From a commercial point of view the Lena will not bear comparison with the Obi and Yonesei Possibly Professor Nordemküld mey discover some resources this summer hitherto, unknown and his enthusiasm may tempt some speculators to send a vessel or two there to tap the trade, but the chances are that the energies of commercial men will for the present be solely directed to the two richer rivers. NEW YORK, Soptember 25th. terrible story of famine and pestilence told by the Evening Post's corsespondent in Rio. Janeiro: A district in Bravil, equal in extent to New England, the Middle Atlantic States, West Virginia, Ohio, and Indiana combined, less Been without rain since July, 1875. Brooks, springs, and wells long ago dried up. Even river beds bave now become dusty channels. Cattle, of which there were vast herds, have died of thirst. People perishing for want of food and water have to Sween's Hotel. The news of their arrival fled from their homes, many of them dying some times whole families together, before reaching a place of refuge. Those of them who escaped have ever crowded the cities of refuge at greatly as, in letter cases, to multiply the population by five, and they are now herded together in the open and Malody made brief addresses, and returned and Malody made brief addresses, and returned streets, living like swine upon the sounty rations issued by the Government, and upon such demonstration or parade will be given, but refuse as they can gather in the gutters. Well nigh maked, and utterly debased by their aufferings, they live in bostial immorality, not sorupling even to cannibalism, in some instances; while small-pox, yellow fever, dysentory and some other diseases are sweeping them away by thousands. As if to leave no element of wretchedness out of the account, they are victims of the most hrutal ill-treatment at the hands of the police and soldiery, and, worse still, at the hands of vile appoulators, who make a trade of these wrotches woos. The picture which the correspondent prosents is scarcely matched in its ghastliness even by the old records of Oriental plague, and the story is more distressing by reason of the fact that these people were peaceful herdsmen and planters, cultivators of the soil, wounded. NEW YORK September 29th. The released Fenian prisoners, Edward Condon and Patrick Melody, arrived to day, on board the steamer Mossl. The Reception Committee—among whom were Colonel Richard B. Burke, Gen. Burke, O'Donovan Rossi, and many others—assembled on board the revenue outter Sherman, which was given them for the oceasion by the Government, and proceeded down the bay to meet the released patriots. They took them on board at quarantine, and a scene of the most stirring character took place. The exiles were warmly emiliace by their fellow countrymen who had assembled to welcome them to America. Both Condon and Melody looked wonderfully strong and healthy considering their recent release after an imprisonment of eleven long years. They were delighted beyond measure at the cordial reception which was granted them. They were soon landed a and Mulody made brief addresses, and returned their cordial and heartfelt thanks. General Post Office, Flongkong, 9th July, 1878. SIR.—An impression seems to have got abroad amongst the Mercantile Community here that correspondence from China for Louden when forwarded by French Packet will reach its destina. tion more quickly if directed via Nanles than if sont via Marseilles. I have pointed out to the senders (who have been induced to redirect their letters for the Marseilles route) that this idea is most probably mistaken. As, however, the French Post Office Agent whom I consulted could not speak posiposing that no time would be gained by sending correspondence or closed mails for London to Naples instead of to Marseilles.-I have, &c., A.
